ABOUT ME

I am a historian of science, with a PhD in Philosophy and a strong interest in contemporary life sciences.

My research interests lie at the intersection of the history of marine ecology and the history of international scientific cooperation initiatives for the monitoring, study and protection of the Mediterranean Sea.

Having worked for three years in the historical archives and library of the Stazione Zoologica Anton Dohrn in Naples (Italy), a leading research institute in the field of marine biology and ecology, I acquired considerable expertise in research and analysis of primary, documentary and library sources. Alongside my research work, I have acquired solid experience in the ordinary management of libraries and historical archives and in the coordination of wide-ranging digitization projects of historical heritage.

I am fully convinced that research in the field of the history of science can benefit from first-hand knowledge of contemporary scientific theories and methodologies and this is why, in addition to my research work, I am completing a Bachelor degree in biology at the University of Naples Federico II (Italy).

To know more about my researches, please visit my ORCID profile: 0000-0002-7480-2538.

WORK EXPERIENCE

[1/12/2021 – Current] Historian of Marine Sciences

Stazione Zoologica Anton Dohrn

City: Naples | Country: Italy

I work as technologist in the Historical Archives and Marine Library of the Stazione Zoologica Anton Dohrn.

The Historical Archives and Marine Library are part of the Department of marine Animal Conservation and Public Engagement (CAPE).

In this context, my main goal is to promote scientific heritage visibility among a community of experts (e.g. historians, ecologists) and the general public. I conduct research in the history of marine sciences by making intensive use of primary documentary and library sources. Besides historiographic research, I am the executive director of the library massive digitization project, managing all aspects related to technical contents, logistics and team coordination. I am also very active in public engagement, both organizing public events and disseminating the results of my research in the history of marine sciences to the general public.

[10/12/2019 – 10/7/2020] Research Scholar

Sapienza Università di Roma

City: Rome | Country: Italy

I carried out a seven-month post-doctoral research period at the Institut d'Histoire et de Philosophie des Sciences et des Techniques (IHPST) belonging to the University Paris I Panthéon-Sorbonne and the CNRS in Paris (FR). The stay was financed by Sapienza University through an advanced training grant for research and/or training activities abroad and allowed me to complete the publication of the research carried out during my doctoral thesis. The research activity, initially carried out at the Paris site, was completed remotely due to the emergency linked to the SARS-CoV-2 epidemic.

[14/11/2017 – 29/9/2019] Postdoctoral Researcher

Ben Gurion University of the Negev

City: Beer sheva | Country: Israel

I worked as a research fellow in history and philosophy of science at the Jacques Loeb Centre for the History and Philosophy of, and Critical Dialogues in, the Life Sciences at Ben Gurion University of the Negev. The research activity carried out in Israel focused on the reconstruction of the scientific biography of the Israeli scientist Aron Arthur Moscona. The results of this research were published on the Journal of the History of Biology and offer a close look to the emergence of the discipline of embryology in Israel. The proximity to such a different cultural environment and academic tradition prompted me to give more space in my research work to the local dimension of the history of science. To this end, I studied Modern Hebrew in order to carry out a historical investigation based on archival materials in Hebrew kept at the Hebrew University of Jerusalem.

[1/5/2013 – 30/12/2013] Student University Tutor

Sapienza University of Rome

City: Rome | Country: Italy

I carried out tutoring assignments in order to facilitate students' awareness and use of the bibliographic resources of the Philosophy Library at Sapienza University in Rome.

[2011 – 2013] Assistant Librarian

Sapienza Università di Roma

City: Rome | Country: Italy

I worked in the provision of library services (distribution of texts, assistance to users, bibliographic research also using IT tools, collection and relocation of books).
